This is an interview w/ Art & Damaris (Di) Montvedt. It is part of the "Costs of the Arctic" interviews. The interview was done at Bill Schneider's home in Fairbanks. Art & Di were chosen for this interview because of their long term interest and investment in the Arctic, in particular, Selby Lake where they now run a lodge. The interview covers their time as teachers - particularly in the Kobuk, Art's flying in different parts of the world, his trapping and wilderness activities in the Brook Range, some of the old times from the Kobuk and his attitudes about wilderness and ^{the} lodge business. The interview starts with Art and then Di enters the
